

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides memory structures for efficient tracking and recycling of physical register assignments. This approach reduces the size of the memory structures needed to track the usage of physical registers and the recycling of these registers.